

Climate Change: No One Can Convince Me

I am powerless over climate change
No one can convince me
I can make a difference
By adjusting my lifestyle and voting for change

Countries with weak emission reduction targets
Will gain competitive advantage over
Countries that pay more for mitigation
Following
Is better than Leading
Because we don't want to pay the price of failure

Environmental protection
Should not interfere with
Economic growth
I don't want to lose my way of life

I trust competitive markets
Will incentivise innovation
Aggressive emission pricing
Will hurt the economy in the long term
Continuing to burn fossil fuels
Is necessary
Achieving net zero emissions
Is not always practical
Adaptation
Is always possible
I trust human progress

We need to look out for ourselves
What we do to reduce our emissions
Matters less than
What the rest of the world does to reduce emissions
The cost to us of reducing emissions
Is more significant than
The global cost of rising emissions

Human activity is not contributing to climate change
I find it very hard to believe
Human civilisation
Will transform
The climate system
In coming decades
Scientists tell us
The climate system is very complex
Greenhouse gases have changed the climate naturally for centuries

What difference can I make today?
No one can fix all of the world's problems
We would all like future generations to have a better life
The wealth we leave to our grandchildren
Will help them more than
The climate we leave to our grandchildren

Climate change is probably all just a conspiracy
You will never hear me say
My actions can make a difference on climate change

Now read this from the bottom up
